

MELJAC Solaris collection: Winner of an International Design Award (IDA)

MELJAC's brass Solaris collection, created in collaboration with Australian designer Marc Newson, has won another prize: the 2021 IDA Silver Award in the Home Interior Products category. This latest award follows the 2021 Red Dot Award and the 2020 MIAW received for the same range.

Solaris, an elegant curved collection made of solid brass, is both aesthetically bold and smoothly satisfying to the touch. This unique range of switches, featuring a sleek design and contrasting finishes, can be used for several functions including sockets and data or USB ports.

The innovative Solaris collection is produced in France. It reflects the winning combination of state-of-the-art technologies and the meticulous craftsmanship.

International Design Awards: a prestigious accolade

A handful of designers, thinkers and entrepreneurs created the International Design Awards (IDA) in 2007 as a response to a lack of recognition and to celebrate smart and sustainable multidisciplinary designs.

The awards exist to recognise, celebrate and promote exceptional design visionaries and discover emerging talent in Architecture, Interior, Product, Graphic and Fashion Design worldwide.

About Marc Newson

Marc Newson, CBE, has been described as one of the most influential designers of his generation. He has worked across a wide range of disciplines, and his clients include companies such as Louis Vuitton, Montblanc, Hermès, Nike, Dom Pérignon, and Jaeger-LeCoultre. Born in Sydney, Australia, Marc graduated from Sydney University in 1986, staging his first solo exhibition at the age of 23 and went on to create his now iconic 'Lockheed Lounge' by the age of 25. He is the only designer represented by the Gagosian Gallery, and leading museums around the world have hosted solo retrospective exhibitions of his design work.
